Institutional Terms & Conditions
for Use of Duke University Press Online Book and Journal Content

Copyright / Proprietary Rights Notice
Duke University Press warrants to institutions that the Press is fully authorized to use, in accordance with the terms and conditions hereof, material from the Duke University Press online content platform read.dukepress.edu; and that the material, if used as described in the below guidelines, does not in any known way infringe any copyright or other proprietary or intellectual property rights of any natural or legal person.

Duke University Press is pleased to participate in the Shared Electronic Resource Understanding (sERU) project, which offers a mechanism that can be used as an alternative to a license agreement. The sERU statement expresses commonly shared understandings of the content provider, the subscribing institution, and authorized users; the nature of the content; use of materials and inappropriate uses; privacy and confidentiality; online performance and service provision; and archiving and perpetual access. Widespread adoption of the sERU model for many electronic resource transactions offers substantial benefits both to publishers and libraries by removing the overhead of bilateral license negotiation.

To view the Recommended Practice, which applies to Duke University Press book and journal content, excluding electronic collections, please visit the NISO sERU Recommended Practice web page.

Please note that some Duke University Press products require the use of a site license agreement. Those products and licenses may be found on our Library Resource Center website. To use sERU in lieu of a site license, please email libraryrelations@dukepress.edu.